DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

Claim 1 is objected to because of the following informalities: in paragraph 6, lines 2 and 3, the word handpress is believed to be a typographical error. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Colvard et al. U.S. Patent 5,738,677 in view of Zelman U.S. Patent 5,403,307.

Colvard et al. disclose an ophthalmic apparatus and method of use for removal of the lens tissue (phacoemulsification of the lens), the apparatus comprising:

a first handpiece (irrigation probe 119) including a laser emitting probe (optical fiber 120) for delivering laser energy and for supplying irrigation liquid (192) to lens of the eye; and a second handpiece (aspiration probe 236) including a needle for sucking/removing emulsified lens tissue and irrigation fluid from the treatment site.

They further teach that it is known to use ultrasonically vibrating needles to remove emulsified lens materials from the treatment site (Col. 1, lines 27-36).

However, although they describe the use of ultrasonically vibrated needles to remove the ablated lens tissue, their aspiration port (aspiration probe 236) is not vibrated. They further fail to teach a control unit for controlling the irrigation and aspiration rates.

Zelman teaches an alternative apparatus and method for softening and extracting cataractous tissue, the apparatus comprising an ultrasonically vibrated needle 212 (Fig. 8 and Col. 9, lines 51-60) and a control unit 68 for controlling the treatment energy (Col. 10, lines 54-57 and col. 12, lines 33-39). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time of the applicant's invention to modify Colvard et al. with Zelman and use a vibrating needle as an alternative suction device, as suggested by Colvard et al., in order to remove the emulsified lens tissue. It would have been further obvious to use a control system in order to control the treatment energy,

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 7 and 8 are allowed. The prior art of record fails to disclose, teach or suggest a method for removing lens tissue from a lens capsule as presently recited.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

U.S. Patent No. 6,623,477 to Elbrecht et al. a medical instrument for phacoemulsification of a lens tissue, the instrument comprising at least two separate handpieces.
